Football Team Selector

A quick guide for your group: set up your squad, pick balanced teams from a WhatsApp poll, and keep ratings up to date

1. Install the app

The app runs in your phone's browser, so there is nothing to download from an app store and no account to create.

- iPhone: open the app link in Safari, tap the Share button (the square with an arrow pointing up), scroll down, tap Add to Home Screen, then tap Add.
- Android: open the link in Chrome, tap the ⋮ menu, then tap Add to Home screen or Install app.
- If the link opens inside WhatsApp or your email app, switch to Safari or Chrome first.

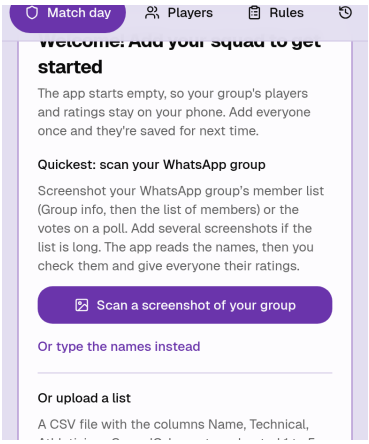

Open it from the new icon on your Home Screen. It needs an internet connection, and the first screenshot you scan takes a few extra seconds while it sets up its text reader.

2. Set up your squad (first time only)

The app starts with an empty player list. Your players and their ratings are saved on your own phone, so nobody else sees them, and you only need to add them once.

Scan your WhatsApp group (quickest)

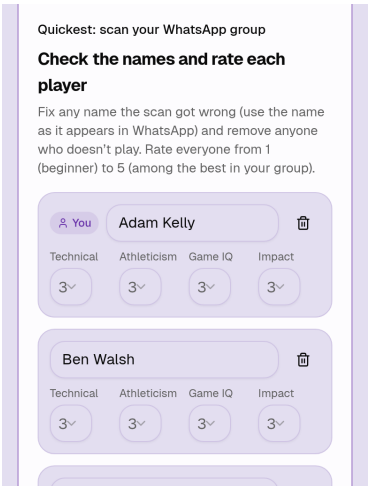

- In WhatsApp, open your group, tap the group name at the top and scroll to the list of members. Screenshot it. If the list is long, scroll and take two or three screenshots.
- In the app, tap Scan a screenshot of your group and choose your screenshots. A poll's list of votes works too.
- Wait a few seconds while the app reads the names. Phone numbers, "Group admin" labels and status messages are ignored.

Check the names and rate each player

- Type your own name in the row marked You, so the app knows who “You” is in future polls.
- Correct any name the scan got wrong, using the name as it appears in WhatsApp. Remove anyone who doesn’t play, and tap Add a name for anyone missing.
- Give every player four ratings from 1 to 5 (explained below), or let the app suggest them (next section). Then tap Save. Your whole squad is stored on your phone.

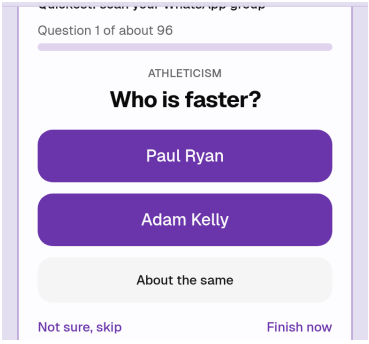

Checking names and rating players

Not sure? Let the app suggest ratings

Rating a whole squad from scratch is hard, but comparing two people you know is easy. Tap Help me rate them and the app asks quick, everyday questions about two players at a time, such as “Who is faster?”

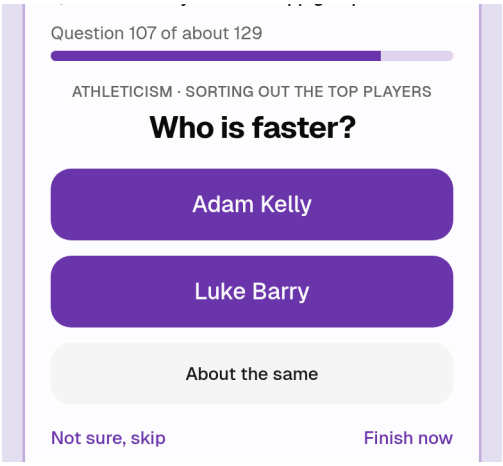

- Tap the name of the player who is better at the thing asked, or About the same.

- There are two questions for each rating. Athleticism: who is faster, and who is fitter. Technical ability: who has better close ball control, and who is the better passer. Game intelligence: who more often finds themselves in space to receive the ball, and who makes more off-the-ball runs. Impact: who communicates more with their teammates, and who is more likely to be successful on a solo run with the ball.
- The app picks each pair to learn the most, then runs a short top-and-bottom round (below). Expect about eight taps per player, around 130 for a group of 16; the progress bar shows how many are left, and you can stop early.
- Tap Not sure, skip if you can't compare two players, or Finish now to stop early.

A rating question

Sorting out the top and bottom players. Once everyone has had their basic questions, the app asks the same questions again, but only between the players currently leading each rating, and then between those at the bottom. In most groups only three or four people are genuinely top players (in a group of about 16), so this round decides who gets a 5 and who is a strong 4, and likewise who really is a 1. You'll see "Sorting out the top players" or "Sorting out the lower end" above these questions.

A question from the top-players round

When you finish, the suggested ratings are filled in for every player. They're only a starting point: check them, change any you disagree with, then tap Save. You can edit anyone's ratings later on the Players tab.

What the ratings mean

Every player gets four ratings from 1 to 5. The app balances teams on all four, not just an overall score.

- Technical Ability: ball control, passing and finishing.
- Athleticism: pace, stamina and strength.
- Game Intelligence: positioning, decision-making and reading the game.
- Impact: how much the player tends to change the result of a game.
- As a guide, 1 is a beginner, 3 is a solid regular and 5 is among the best in your group.

Other ways to add players

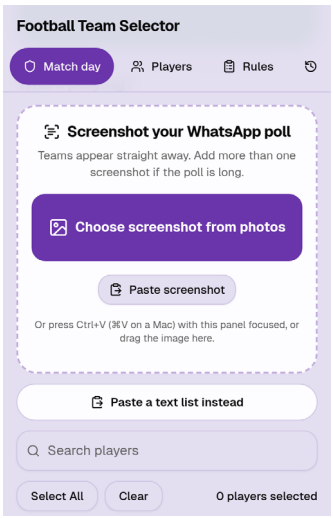

Upload a list: on the Players tab or the welcome screen, tap Download template, fill it in with Excel, Numbers or Google Sheets (Name, Technical, Athleticism, Game IQ, Impact, ratings 1 to 5), save it as CSV and tap Upload CSV file. Names already in the list are updated and nobody is removed.

Add one at a time: on the Players tab, tap Add player and type the name exactly as it appears in WhatsApp. Enter the four ratings yourself, or tap Help me rate them (quick questions): the app asks about eight questions comparing the new player with people you've already rated, such as "Who is faster?". If the answers point to a 5, it asks one more, comparing them with one of your top players, so a newcomer only gets a 5 if they really are up there with your best (the same check applies at the bottom for a 1). Check the suggested ratings, then tap Save player.

Later, when a new name turns up in a poll screenshot, the app flags it under Not recognised. Tap Add with ratings, then Help me rate them to answer the same quick comparison questions, check the suggested ratings and tap Add player. If your own name wasn't in the You row, set it under Settings, This is me.

3. Pick teams from a WhatsApp poll

- When the poll closes, open it in WhatsApp, tap View votes, and screenshot the list of names (side button and volume-up together). If the list is long, scroll and take a second screenshot.
- Open the app. On the Match day tab, tap Choose screenshot from photos and pick your screenshot or screenshots.
- Wait a few seconds. The app reads the names, ignores phone numbers and times, and shows your two teams (Blue Team and Yellow Team unless you choose other colours; see Choose your team colours below).

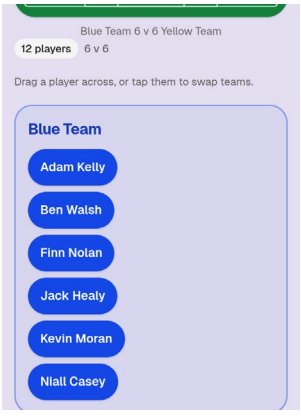

The screenshot panel on the Match day screen

Check that the player count above the teams matches the number of votes. If a name could be two people, or someone isn't in your list yet, the app stops and asks you rather than guessing. You can also tap Review players to see what it read. On a laptop you can paste a screenshot with Ctrl+V (⌘V on a Mac), or tick players by hand and tap GENERATE TEAMS.

With an odd number of players, the smaller team is given stronger players to make up for being one short.

4. Adjust and share the teams

- Tap a player's name to move them to the other team. Tap one name from each side for a straight swap; the balance updates straight away.
- Tap REGENERATE to see the next most balanced option.
- Tap COPY TEAMS, then open your WhatsApp group, press and hold in the message box and tap Paste.

Choose your team colours

The app calls the two sides Blue Team and Yellow Team until you change them. If your group wears other colours, or simply splits into those wearing bibs and those not, set it once and every screen follows: the pitch, the team lists, the balance details, saved match history, and the text you copy into WhatsApp.

- Tap Settings, then under Team colours pick Team 1 and Team 2 from the list: Blue, Yellow, Red, Green, White, Black, Orange, Purple, Sky Blue, Navy, Pink, Grey, Maroon, Bibs or Non-Bibs.
- For a bibs game, tap Use Bibs v Non-Bibs. The copied teams are then headed Bibs and Non-Bibs. Back to Blue v Yellow undoes it, and the two teams can never be given the same colour.
- Match-day instructions use the new names too, for example “Put Sam in bibs” or “Sam on the red team”.

5. Keep the player list up to date

- Update ratings: on the Players tab, search for the player, swipe the table to the left to see the icons, tap the pencil, change the ratings and tap Save player.
- Add a newcomer: tap Add player (or Add with ratings when a new name appears in a poll screenshot), then Help me rate them for quick comparison questions, or include them in a CSV upload. If the answers point to a 5, the app asks one extra question comparing them with one of your top players, so only genuine top players get a 5 (and likewise for a 1 at the other end).

- Someone stops playing: tap the box icon to archive them. Archived players aren't offered for selection, and tapping the icon again brings them back.
- Delete: the bin icon removes a player permanently, after asking you to confirm.
- Share one list across your group: on the Players tab, tap Export CSV and send the file. Others tap Upload CSV file to load it into their own app.

Editing a player's ratings

Everything you enter stays on your phone. If someone else uses the app, they start with their own empty list, and nothing they do affects yours.
